

One of the lessons I learned from the Bible a long time ago is that whatever we fixate on, we come to resemble: it imprints itself, somehow, on our psyche. Of late, I have noted that we daily become more and more like the late unlamented Soviet Union - more and more consolidation and centralized control; fewer and fewer options, less and less real freedom. Isn't it ironic? Do not add the FCC to the lengthening list of those contributing to the curtailment of our democratic freedoms. Diversity is good.
